

DU Initiates Career Development Program To Feature Alumni Mentoring and Networking

On February 24, 2000, Bruce Tracey, our faculty adviser par excellence, launched Delta Upsilon's Career Development Program. Seventeen brothers and one sorority guest participated in the inaugural two-hour session at the house. Everyone responded with enthusiasm; the possibilities are clearly unlimited.

Millie Reed, the director of Career Services & Employer Relations from the hotel school, led the session. She expertly covered all of the basics—resumes, cover letters, personal marketing plans, interviewing, and Cornell resources available. (Millie revealed that this was the first time she had ever been invited to a fraternity at Cornell. She clearly savored the experience and was as captivated by our brothers as they were by her).

At the session we had a mix of pledges, sophomores, juniors, and seniors. We learned that summer jobs and internships are just as important to undergraduates as are jobs for seniors in the outside world.

The diversity of the skills, accomplishments, and career goals of our brothers is impressive—ranging from golf course design to Internet graphics creation, marketing, biology, engineering, hotel management, financial services, and many others.

Basic job search skills training and other resources are readily available in each of Cornell's seven major colleges and at the university career center, so we don't need to duplicate them. However, alumni support available through Cornell, while of high quality, is limited, and often it is not personalized to an individual student's needs.

DU Alumni Opportunity

Our opportunity as DU alumni is to launch something really special in terms of alumni/undergraduate relations at Cornell. While informal networking is commonplace within the Greek community, no chapter has implemented a proactive approach or mobilized the power and talent of its alumni. We can invent the model and make a difference that will have a permanent impact at Cornell and that will make us all proud to be DU brothers.

Here is what we need from DU alumni:

- Five to 10 alumni to form our advisory committee.
- Twenty career mentors.
- One hundred people to serve as information and networking sources.

Young alumni will be a critical element to this program's success. We need good participation from brothers from different eras and from different career backgrounds.

This is your opportunity to do something unique for DU and Cornell. Sharing your success with our undergraduate brothers will be gratifying to you and enormously appreciated by them.

Please volunteer. We guarantee that we will respect your time constraints and privacy. For career mentors, we will implement a self-selection process to be controlled by the alumni steering committee. For those who are willing to serve as an information or networking source, your primary contribution will be your knowledge, experience, and insight. We will not publish your name directly to the undergraduates. All contacts with you will be screened by alumni who will qualify the request and confirm your availability.

This is an opportunity to give back to DU and Cornell and to help an exceptional group of young men to get their careers moving in the right direction. You will find this a rewarding experience and a chance to connect with a great team of people in a worthwhile cause. You will gain insight into the current generation of brothers at DU and have a lot of fun in the process.

If you have an interest in participating or hearing more about this cutting-edge DU program, please contact us at du@du.org.

Systems Chair Announces Internet Initiatives For DU

In recent years the Internet explosion has been startling. Everywhere we look nowadays we see dot-coms and Internet start-ups. There is little doubt that this is where the world of information is going. There is no reason the Delta Upsilon Chapter of Cornell University should not also move in this direction. As systems chair (a newly formed position in charge of computer maintenance and Internet concerns), I plan to take steps to make Delta Upsilon competitive in the information age. This move will involve the creation of a Delta Upsilon Web site.

This site will have four purposes. The first of these is to give information about the Delta Upsilon house and its history and traditions here at Cornell. The second is to provide information about the brothers who are currently attending Cornell. The third is to provide for students who are interested in rushing or pledging Delta Upsilon information about cost of living, brother activities, and the chapter generally. The final purpose is to create a communication network for the current brothers and all of the alumni.

I want to create a digital place where alumni can keep in touch with one another and where they can quickly find out about chapter news and happenings. In this digital setting there can be better interaction among all DUs here at Cornell University. A member of the class of '85 looking to see how some of his brothers are doing will be able to do this at the same site where a senior living in the house can post his resume. I think that this resource will be of great benefit and use to all of the members of Delta Upsilon. I look forward to being able to provide this tool to the entire Delta Upsilon family.

Focusing On Philanthropy

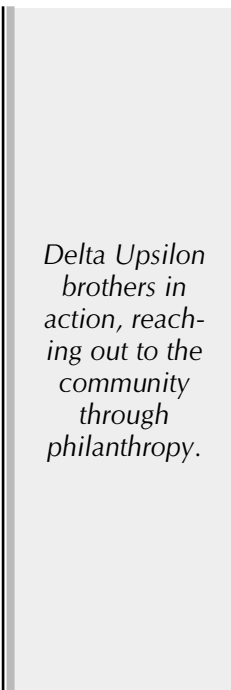

This year, the brotherhood as a whole has decided to increase its philanthropic presence in the community of Ithaca and Tompkins County.

On Saturday, February 12, one day after our annual Valentine's Day formal, the pledges and I participated in the first philanthropic event of the semester. We painted the scraped, nicked, and faded walls of the nautilus and cardio room as well as the multi-purpose room for children in the YMCA of Ithaca. The program director of the YMCA is greatly appreciative of our work, for he told me that if he had to resort to hiring a professional painting service, the costs would have cut into his budget too deeply. The most unique part of the day, however, was when one of the pledges talked to a young child who was having his birthday party in the multi-purpose room that we painted. That child will forever remember talking to a "big, cool frat boy."

On Saturday, February 26, most of the brothers and all of the pledges participated in the annual Chili Cook-off on the Commons. We were asked by On-Site Volunteers to work the event. Furthermore, in the coming days pledges and brothers will be donating their time on weekends to other On-Site Volunteer projects that are as yet to be determined. It is only a matter of time until DU is seen as a pillar of good will in the Ithaca community.

Fraternally yours,
Justin Ganderson

DU Announces Most Diversified Pledge Class In Years

For many years, diversification of the house has been seen as critical to its long-term success. The past couple of years, brothers and alumni have pooled their thoughts and resources on how to recruit pledges from a wider variety of campus sports and activities while maintaining the excellent character inherent in the brotherhood.

Mission accomplished. The year 2000 pledge class promises to be solid in character, as well as more eclectic than any in past years. Of the new pledges, five did not come to Cornell playing football. They chose DU because of the enormous rushing effort of the house, which has been adapted to better welcome the general Cornell population. Several new methods were utilized by the brothers to let new students know they were welcome. Fun in the Sun was dominated by the DU volleyball court. Many freshmen came for a fun game and to make new friends. Fall '99 was also the setting of the inaugural open DU barbecue for freshmen, which made our house stand out in the minds of all new students.

The fun did not stop there, however. Prospective pledges (those who had attended our barbecue or the carnival or who had known brothers from class) were invited out with brothers, whether to bowl, go to a movie, or visit a party. This gave prospective members a chance to meet all of the brothers and to meet some other non-football players who are proud to be DUs. The underlying goal was to make these rushees feel comfortable at our house, which we believe we achieved very well.

When rush week came around, we got a chance to meet even more freshmen and showed them a great time. We also found it very effective to introduce some of them to the freshman football players who were going to pledge so that friendships and bonds could be made to erase their doubts about not fitting in with the new pledge class. Soon, they were all going down to Willard Straight together to sign their bids.

We are very proud of our new pledge class. Its members, who hail from around the country and from a wealth of backgrounds, contribute

A Few Words From The Corporation President...

Dear DU Brothers:

Some quick updates on the state of the chapter and a comment on a new program that your alumni board believes will bring enhanced interaction between the undergraduate brothers and a larger number of alumni on an ongoing basis.

First, underneath the noise and normal annual cycle on the hill, there is an improving trend in almost every aspect of the chapter's activities. We have an excellent group of new chapter officers, led by an incredible, energetic, and focused new president, Brian Strahine. We also have 14 really great and talented new pledges. The chapter continues to improve the care of the physical house and furniture. The alumni association in turn is continuing to share the costs of refurbishing the house. The most recent example is the complete refurbishment of the dining room tables and chairs.

Please read the article in this issue of the Noose by Fred Harwood on the Career Development Program (see page one). This program is a great opportunity for alumni brothers from all around the world to get involved in helping undergraduate brothers define and develop career opportunities.

One last note, Reunion this year will be the weekend of June 10th and 11th. The alumni association will hold an informal reception at the house on that Saturday beginning at 4:00 p.m. DU alumni and friends are all welcome.

Best regards,
Robert J. Verna '68

Chapter President Provides Fall Recap

The summer saw a large number of brothers making 6 South Avenue their residence. For various reasons, including academic and job opportunities, as well as football off-season workouts, many brothers chose to stay in Ithaca for the summer. As one of those brothers who stayed, I can testify that the chance to live with a few of my brothers helped me make my decision. Had the house not been open I believe a number of us would not have chosen to stay. We are all happy to say that except for a few pesky bats, the summer came and went without a hitch.

The fall saw a number of brothers achieving success in a variety of activities. The varsity football team had a very good season, ending with a 7-3 record. Chris Morosetti, Tom Kaplun, Charlie Mitchell, and Matt Holleran anchored the Big Red's front line. One of their most important responsibilities was protecting Cornell's starting quarterback, DU's own Ricky Rahne, who had an impressive sophomore year. Kevin Farese provided a spark to the wide receiver core. Pete Iversen, Cory Ziskind, and Gilbert Muzquiz were all solid on the special teams.

The defense was led by a host of DUs, including starters Tom Richards and Tom Crone on the defensive line and all three linebackers. Dan Weyandt stepped into the middle, and Nate Fisher and I covered the outside positions. It should be mentioned that all of us owe a big thank you to Anthony Smulski, whose inspired play on the defensive line served as a major motivator to us all. We can only hope for continued success in the future.

The fall also saw Brian Fulmer and our favorite RA, Mike Hood, among other DUs, participate in the big brother program in Ithaca. Additionally, Justin Stevens tore up the rugby field, and Keirian Brown opened the basketball season as a starter. Brian Strahine organized a very successful Fun in the Sun, and Rush Chairs Tom Crone, Anthony Smulski, and Bryan Esposito led a successful and intense fall rush program.

Overall the fall was full of excitement and accomplishment. As a house we are proud of ourselves and the fall we had. We hope to see everyone back in the days ahead to say hi to the DUs of today.

Cleanups Help Build Friendships Among Brothers

My greetings from 6 South. The Cornell Chapter of Delta Upsilon is doing better than ever. After many group efforts, the house is in great shape, as is the brotherhood.

Under the hot Ithaca sun several brothers took it upon themselves last summer to make safer the "Death Trail." Chris Morosetti, Bryan Esposito, Charlie Mitchell, and Tom Kaplun gave a tremendous effort, along with other brothers who resided in the house during the summer. They removed the loose soil base and replaced the dirt with more sturdy concrete slabs. The Death Trail is no longer a hazard. The efforts were subsidized by the generous alumni of the house. Thanks to the efforts of these unselfish brothers, the walk up to academia sure is sweeter.

The interior of the house is slowly but surely undergoing a face-lift. Interior design ideas are being discussed with rabid interest. Thanks to our dedicated alumni support, spearheaded by President Bob Verna, the ideas will soon be a reality. These ideas will bring the brotherhood closer together and also restore some of the house's antiquity. The brotherhood is really looking forward to these ideas.

Friendships are being made stronger every week during the weekly cleanups. It is now a tradition for the brothers to come together after the Sunday evening dinner and clean the house. These cleanups are a time when brothers can share their weekend stories. Thanks to these great cleanups, the house is very clean, and respect for it is very high.

Thanks to all of the brothers for pitching in and giving a hand. Cleanups are a sure indication that we are moving in the right direction.

Fraternally yours,
Anthony Smulski

DU Announces The Beginning Of The Brother-Of-The-Month Program

The Brother-of-the-Month Award, initiated by the executive board in January 2000, is given to the brother going "above and beyond the call of duties asked of him as a brother of Delta Upsilon, in regard to individual chapter assistance and the four founding principles." It is given to a non-executive board member who shows the willingness and desire to make the house better as a whole. I was its first recipient.

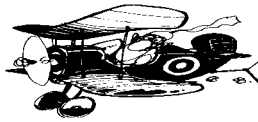

The award has a two-fold purpose. First, it is meant to inspire brothers who hold a non-executive board house position to put in more than the cursory time demanded by their job. Second, it is meant to invigorate brothers who do not hold a house position to take action and become involved in keeping the house looking great. The award acts as a catalyst for underclassmen who want to become oriented in the vast array of duties necessary for the house to survive and thrive.

Respectfully submitted,
Matt Holleran, Rush Chairman

DU & Cornell Giving

As alumni of a fraternity whose house is Cornell-owned, we DUs are in the enviable position of being able to allocate our university giving for ongoing house renovations and improvements. Since these same gifts count toward our giving to the university, we can show our support of Cornell while ensuring that DU's facilities continue to support the academic, fraternal, and social goals that helped to make our undergraduate years so meaningful.

To those of you who have allocated your Cornell giving to Delta Upsilon in the past, I offer my deepest thanks and encourage you to continue to do so. If you haven't yet made a gift to DU through Cornell, I am happy to tell you that the process is simple. When you make your gift to Cornell, just write in the information on the pledge form or add a cover note with your check. Even making a memo on the check itself will suffice.

In a time when the value of Greek life is being questioned at so many other colleges and institutions, we should consider ourselves fortunate to be alumni of a fraternal organization so well supported by its university. I hope many of you will express your appreciation of this by giving generously this year and by allocating your gift to the continued maintenance and improvement of Delta Upsilon.
